About the Presenter

John B. Thomas, M. Ed.,
Educational Consultant

John spent much of his career working with people with autism spectrum disorders as a teacher, classroom consultant, diagnostician, adolescent and adult therapist, vocational coordinator in a residential program, and a supported employment coordinator. He also worked as a behavior specialist and as a staff development specialist before becoming the educational consultant for autism, severe-profound, and multi-handicapped with the North Carolina Department of Public Instruction. He was a principle author of the TEACCH Transition Assessment Profile (Pro-Ed., Inc., 2006). Currently he helps coordinate the training efforts of the Autism Society of North Carolina and continues work on developing curriculum for students with significant cognitive disabilities. A major focus of his work is identifying procedures that assure success in residential and vocational settings for adults with autism.

Ginny Hules, Amy Salamon, Virginia Warrick

Atlantic Technical Center's Post-graduate Alternatives for Secondary Students (PASS) Program

Ginny, Amy, and Virginia are support staff within the Atlantic Technical Center's Post-graduate Alternatives for Secondary Students (PASS) program. PASS is a community-based transition model located at select technical centers and high schools throughout Broward County school district. Each student participates in a curriculum that emphasizes: academics, life skills, social skills, community-based instruction, and work experience.

Training Description

This workshop is designed to help teachers, support staff, and families understand transition planning for students with autism spectrum disorders. Participants will learn about best practices in literature, federal and state requirements for transition planning, and classroom and community-based strategies.
