Training Description

Target Audience: (This training is for special and general education teachers, administrators, related service providers, and paraprofessionals.)

This 2-part training series will discuss the unique learning styles of students with ASD and how they affect academic performance, specifically in reading comprehension and writing composition. Session one will provide explanations of the underlying reasons why students with ASD struggle with reading comprehension, provide a framework to create meaningful accommodations, and show examples of classroom supports. Session two will utilize the same framework and look at strategies to to help students with writing composition. Both sessions will use a balance of lecture, discussion, activities, and planning.

Training Objectives

Participants will be able to:

- Describe how the core symptoms of ASD and related cognitive learning characteristics impact learning in the areas of reading and writing
- Choose evidence-based strategies to support intervention for reading and writing
- Create various accommodations for students with ASD to help improve reading comprehension and writing composition tasks/activities
