About the Presenter

Dr. Jennifer Kurth is an assistant professor of special education at the University of Kansas. Her academic interests include methods of implementing inclusive education, embedding critical instruction within the context and routines of general education, as well as providing appropriate supports and services for individual learners. Dr. Kurth's research also examines how teacher, student, and family interactions support or constrain learning and socialization in general education classrooms. She also studies how teacher candidates develop their dispositions and skills in inclusive practices.

Training Description

Target Audience: Educators, Administrators, Professionals, Individuals with ASD & Family Members

The presentation will focus on methods of delivering effective, high-quality inclusive services to all learners. It will also include the values, practices, and policies that guide implementation of inclusive services and will focus on strategies for teachers to use in schools and classrooms.

Training Objectives

At the conclusion of the training, audience members should be able to:

- Understand the legal, philosophical, and research bases of inclusive education.
- Describe effective classroom and environmental supports.
- Describe and implement effective teaching practices.
- Describe and implement effective supports, including curricular accessibility.

Regional Trainings are hosted by the Center for Autism and Related Disabilities, through the Partnership for Effective Programs for Students with Autism (PEPSA), a program funded by the State of Florida, Department of Education, K-12 Public Schools, Bureau of Exceptional Education and Student Services, through federal assistance under the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), Part B. www.DOEpartnership.org
